SECTION B. (50 MARKS)

Questions 51 to 55 carry ten marks each. Do them all.

51. Read the passage below carefully and answer in full sentences the questions that follow.

There are many species of insects than all animals added together. The study of insects is called entomology. It is extremely important that we learn about insects since some of them do some damage to man, his animals, crops, stores for food and other materials.

Despite the terrible damage and diseases caused by insects, there are benefits that man generally gets from insects. Insects play an importance part in pollination of crops. Some insects also produce honey and wax and silk worms produce fine silk threads that are used in the manufacture of expensive fabrics.

Insects are grouped under arthropods and have common characteristics such as exo-skeletons, jointed legs and segmented bodies. Their bodies are divided into three distinct parts. That is the head, thorax and abdomen. The head, the first part of the body, comprises the feelers and the compound eyes. The second part of the body is the thorax and this consists of three segments which bear three pairs of legs. The insects with three pairs of legs can easily be differentiated from spider with four pairs.

The abdomen is the third part of the body. The segments of the abdomen have no legs but contain various organs of the reproductive and respiratory system. In some insects, there are some structures at the back end of the abdomen which have various functions for example, egg-laying as seen at the back end of the bush crickets or for causing a painful sting as seen at the back end of a wasp.
