Matilida is the daughter of Bulasio, the well-known bicycle repairer in the village. She is the fourth child in the family. In August this year, Matilida turned twelve; she is now in P.7.

Each day, during the school term, Matilida walks to school, a distance of nearly three kilometres from home. She does so with many other children in the village. They have to walk fast and sometimes run to be in time for the school's first activity of the day; sweeping the classrooms and cleaning the school compound, Matilida and her friends have begun each day like this since they were in P.I. they do it without complaining because they know that general cleaning of the school is part of the daily routine.

One day, after school. Matilida and her friends started walking back home. They had just gone beyond the local market when it started raining heavily, but they continued their journey home. They got worried about their book-becoming wet because each one of them carried her books in a small polythene bag. As it continued raining heavily Matilida and her friends started running. Matilida was ahead of the others, showing them where to pass on the wet ground. As they passed near a small rock, Matilida slipped on one hidden in a pool of water and fell with all her books. It was still raining heavily. Everyone stopped to help her. She was all covered in mud. She was lucky that the; polythene bag was properly tied Minutes later, it stopped raining.

They now decided to walk slowly and as they reached their village, each took the path to her home. When Matilida reached home, her mother was unhappy to see her looking like a ghost. She helped her to change the clothes.

Afterwards, Matilida pulled out everything from her polythene bag. She noticed that her pen and pencil were missing. They must have fallen in the pool. Then she saw a hole in her polythene bag! Although it started raining heavily again, Matilida decided to run back to the place where she had fallen in the pool of water.
